What Does the Bible Say About Property Rights?

The Bible is pro-private property rights. Many passages support this stance. Accordingly, all governments—locally, nationally, and worldwide—should protect private property rights. God knows that personal ownership of private property is fundamental to every individual's ability to express his or her best possible self as a reflection of being created in God's image. In addition, private property rights are fundamental to personal and national fruitfulness. Read on, my friend, and learn more about how you can defend such beliefs based upon what God has said in His Word.

MINISTRY UPDATE

Capitol Ministries is Shining the Light of the Gospel in Panama's Government

On August 26, 2025, Capitol Ministries celebrated the launch of a new Bible Study for Panama's legislators. Ministry Leader Roderick Burgos and Latin America Director Oscar Zamora had long sought to establish this ministry, but repeated obstacles had delayed their efforts.

After persistent prayer and dedication, God opened the door as 25 legislators, state officials, and pastors gathered for the inaugural weekly Bible Study—a ministry that had never before existed in Panama. Ralph Drollinger,

What Does the Bible Say About Property Rights

I. INTRODUCTION

The biblically based political ideology of private property ownership stands in absolute and distinct contradiction to the political ideology of communism. As Karl Marx said in his Communist Manifesto, “The theory of the Communists may be summed up in a single sentence: the abolition of private property.” If the ideology of private property rights is the main difference between capitalism and communism, how can you reason and form convictions about this matter from Scripture?

What passages come to mind which substantiate that God is pro-private property? Another way to look at this issue is the opposite: Saying you are anti-communist is one thing, but can you reason your position from Scripture?

Every believer should be able to present a solid basis for being pro-private property rights (and therein capitalism, in general) via the use of God's Word. This study is designed to aid you in that quest and to help you form personal and political convictions that are riveted upon God's guidance as explicated in and from His Revelation.

Before building a scriptural case for private property and capitalism, the precedent that God is the ultimate owner of everything must first be investigated.

II. GOD'S ULTIMATE OWNERSHIP OF ALL PROPERTY

Scripture teaches that God is the ultimate owner of the earth and all that is therein—not communist governments—and that He desires individuals to be His stewards of His creation.

The earth is the LORD'S, and all it contains, the world, and those who dwell in it (Psalm 24:1).

“Behold, to the LORD your God belong heaven and the highest heavens, the earth and all that is in it” (Deuteronomy 10:14).

In granting man stewardship responsibilities of that which He ultimately owns, He has specifically entrusted managerial responsibilities to the top of His creative order: Man, whom, unlike any other aspect of His creation, God created in His image. This fundamental intention is conveyed in Genesis 1:26–28:

Then God said, “Let Us make man in Our image, according to Our likeness; and let them rule over the fish of the sea and over the birds of the sky and over the cattle and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creeps on the earth.” God created man in His own image, in the image of God He created him; male and female He created them. God blessed them; and God said to them, “Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the earth, and subdue it; and rule over the fish of the sea and over the birds of the sky and over every living thing that moves on the earth.”

Incumbent in man's stewardship role over all of creation, God uses the descriptive word subdue (kabash) to encompass what He specifically desires for man to do: this Hebrew word kabash specifically means “to bring into servitude.” In Numbers 32:22–29 and Joshua 18:1, this same word is used in a parallel contextual meaning: Israel is to subdue the land of Canaan for the land to serve Israel. Importantly, the contextual usage of kabash as used in this Genesis 1 passage pertains to God's instructing those in His creation who are made in His image to discover, understand, develop, utilize, and enjoy all of the earth's overabundant resources. Importantly implied in God's command to man is this: Man is to carry out His God-appointed stewardship responsibilities with respect and thanksgiving to Him.

Having first established this principle of God's ultimate ownership, the following point need now be made: even though God is the ultimate owner of everything, Scripture repeatedly communicates—"it is said" and this directive will be seen in the passages that follow—that the property belongs to His stewards, i.e., individuals.

Emphasis needs to be placed on the word individuals, which is in direct opposition to the idea of God's conveying property ownership to a government, a society, or a nation as a whole. This conveyance of ownership by God to man in specificity is evidenced in the following passages:

III. PERSONAL PROPERTY RIGHTS

A myriad of Scriptures evidence God's expectation of personal ownership of His property versus implications of governmental or societal ownership of His property. The following are only representative of the many.

A. THE EIGHTH COMMANDMENT

"You shall not steal."

Exodus 20:15 presumes that people own something that can be stolen. For instance, I cannot take my neighbor's donkey because it belongs to my neighbor. A modern example would include intellectual property. You cannot search through my email files and give them to whomever you choose unbeknownst to me; to do so is to steal my property.

B. THE TENTH COMMANDMENT

"You shall not covet your neighbor's house; you shall not covet your neighbor's wife or his male servant or his female servant or his ox or his donkey or anything that belongs to your neighbor."

Exodus 20:17 above, addresses the heart. Covet (chamad in this Hebrew passage and epithumeo in Greek—cf. Romans 7:7) means "a strong desire; wantonness." Used in this context, covet is the desire to take from another what rightfully belongs to him.

Note specifically that the passage does not say those things belong to the community or the government; three times the passage uses the word neighbor (rea) meaning "a person, friend, or fellow." Again, the passage reveals that the ox or donkey is not owned by a government, but by a person, friend, or fellow: that is to whom God says it belongs.

C. IRRESPONSIBLE OWNERSHIP

"If, however, an ox was previously in the habit of goring and its owner has been warned, yet he does not confine it and it kills a man or a woman, the ox shall be stoned and its owner also shall be put to death."

Exodus 21:29 uses the word owner (baal) in relation to the bad behaving ox. This is an example of an irresponsible owner. Further and importantly, this passage reveals that to own something means you are legally connected to it, to the extent that you can be found personally liable for damages caused by something you own. Today, such laws stemming from the Torah, (i.e., the first five books of the Bible: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy) and their assumption of personal property rights prove to be very motivational to owners. These laws lead to being a good manager! Such laws generate personal asset management skills and their upside: the creation of excellent value-added products. Sadly, such ensuing motivations for creating excellent products and services are not achieved in communist nations where personal property rights and personal property liability do not exist.

Once I toured my friend's value-added fresh corn packaging facility. Every the Founder and President of Capitol Ministries, passionately shared the biblical mandate for reaching public servants with the Gospel and the lasting fruit such a ministry could bring to the nation.

Roderick Burgos, CapMin's Ministry Leader for Panama, has built a strong network of relationships with legislators while working alongside them to defend family values. With a business background, Roderick understands that strong families are the foundation of a strong nation. Yet he also recognizes that for this foundation to remain effective, the light of the Gospel must shine brightly in both the family and the government.

Both Ralph Drollinger and Oscar Zamora expressed their joy that Bible teaching will now be an important part of Panama's legislative life.

night a crew came in to sterilize the plant to eliminate E. coli and other possible bacterial contaminants—all of which could harm a consumer. I wager to say he would not be so motivated if he did not himself own the corn nor ultimately be liable for the product's safety. In fact, history testifies to the fact that communist states do not last. The lack of personal responsibility and the ensuing motivation that stems from the pride of personal ownership is the reason.

D. MOVING A LANDMARK

"You shall not move your neighbor's boundary mark, which the ancestors have set." Deuteronomy 19:14 speaks to the sin of moving land boundaries. What infraction is committed if the land is not owned by another person? Proverbs 23:10 adds to this understanding:

Do not move the ancient boundary or go into the fields of the fatherless.

Each segment of this proverb concerning private property ownership serves to give insight into the meaning of the other. Attempting to steal another person's property because of his inability to defend what is rightfully his is unjust and wrong.

E. THE YEAR OF THE JUBILEE

"You shall thus consecrate the fiftieth year and proclaim a release through the land to all its inhabitants. It shall be a jubilee for you, and each of you shall return to his own property, and each of you shall return to his family" (Leviticus 25:10).

This subject of property rights becomes increasingly interesting with the introduction of this Scripture. Even capitalism and personal property ownership is not a perfect national economic system in a fallen world (I am afraid that as proud Americans we are often guilty of thinking that capitalism is a perfect system of governance). Always keep in mind that no economic system is perfect in a fallen world!

Churchill once quipped, "Democracy is the worst form of government, except all the others!" Only when Christ returns and sets up His rule as the King of Kings will there be a perfect government on the earth.

The Old Testament (OT) book of Leviticus informs the reader that every 50 years Israel's people were to hit the restart button on their personal property/capitalistic-based economy. Akin to playing Monopoly today wherein one or two players in time will monopolize all the properties, in a fallen world some people inevitably become economic juggernauts while others less gifted or competitive can and will fall to the wayside. Some are not as strong or able as others and cannot compete or gain wealth even though they live in a personal-property-based culture. This seeming inequity is one of those realities of living in a fallen world.

Personal property ownership is not a perfect cure-all in a fallen world, but nonetheless it is a better basis for economic prosperity than all other alternatives. Relative to this week's study, the point to be underscored from Leviticus 25:10 is not how the Year of Jubilee should or should not apply in America today. I want to pinpoint this section: each of you shall return to his own property. As in the other aforementioned passages, God's endorsement of an economy with his own property (even with its faults) is in view here.

F. A SUMMARY OF PASSAGES ON PERSONAL PROPERTY RIGHTS

The Bible speaks repeatedly regarding the economic creation and well-being of a nation and how that best occurs in what will always be until Christ returns, an unfair, disproportionately talented, fallen world. The best system, says God's Word, is via a government based upon and allowing personal, private property rights. With the inclusion of the Year of the Jubilee (an occasional adjustment mechanism in a private property economic structure), it is safe to say that God is a capitalist—not a communist.

These five passages illustrate and affirm that one of God's fundamental principles for government is to grant private property ownership rights to individuals.

The economic principle that stems from the Torah is this: necessary for achieving a proper functioning, fruitful and prosperous nation in a material sense is personal property ownership. (The Bible does not deem material things as evil; such thinking is a faulty dualism and the subject of other studies.) To violate God's principle of private ownership, that is, to enact some form or level of communism in a state is patently unbiblical and will ultimately lead to the demise of a nation's motivation, economic engine, growth, and overall material well-being of its people.

IV. THE NATURAL TENDENCY OF GOVERNMENT TO OVERREACH

In a greater-than-just-material-concerns sense, God has ordained four other separate institutions that He intends to function simultaneously and independently of government in order to best achieve His purposes and herald the riches of His grace (cf. Ephesians 2:7) in a fallen world prior to His Second Coming.

Government is only one of five co-equal institutions. And within that spectrum, each institution has God-given responsibilities that it does better than could any of the others. For example, what government does best is suppress evil. But keep in mind the other four institutions, i.e., marriage, family, commerce and the church, do what they do better than government! Government cannot accomplish for a nation what the other four institutions can achieve much more expeditiously and efficiently.

- Marriage promulgates.
- The family cultivates.
- Commerce invigorates.
- The church translates.

Those theological pillars of institutional understanding are fundamental to a biblical worldview and serve to qualify the role of government.

Given this contextualization and the focus of this study, the following is also in view: the institution of government is always on the prowl, desiring to play in the sandbox of every other institution making a mess whenever it does! Left to roam, this institution soon wanders outside of its God-designed purpose:

- It perverts marriage.
- It stymies the family.
- It encroaches on the church.

And left to its self-centered ways, it begins to overstep commerce—by eroding or attacking private property rights!

Left unchecked, government will eclipse God's separate institution of commerce, which must permit personal property rights in order to flourish institutionally and materially invigorate a nation.

The preponderance of government is nothing new. The prophet Samuel spoke to Israel about the increasing pervasive nature of civil administrations when Israel first mentioned the idea to him that they wanted their own king. The prophet sagely responded to the nation Israel in 1 Samuel 8:10–18:

So Samuel spoke all the words of the LORD to the people who had asked of him a king. He said, "This will be the procedure of the king who will reign over you: he will take your sons and place them for himself in his chariots and among his horsemen and they will run before his chariots. He will appoint for himself commanders of thousands and of fifties, and some to do his plowing and to reap his harvest and to make his weapons of war and equipment for his chariots. He will also take your daughters for perfumers and cooks and bakers. He will take the best of your fields and your vineyards and your olive groves and give them to his servants. He will take a tenth of your seed and of your vineyards and give to his officers and to his servants. He will also take your male servants and your female servants and your best young men and your donkeys and use them for his work. He will take a tenth of your flocks, and you yourselves will become his servants. Then you will cry out in that day because of your king whom you have chosen for yourselves, but the LORD will not answer you in that day."

When government goes unchecked, it begins to take from the people, confiscating more and more for itself. The word take appears six times in this passage! Be on guard: runaway government is normative in a fallen world!

Therefore, as exegetically substantiated in the previous point, God's blueprint for a nation's people—not its government—is to possess the bulk of property and wealth of the nation. It, therefore, follows that, according to the Bible, government must be kept in check, otherwise, the institution will begin to think it can achieve for its people tasks that

Reflecting on his partnership with Roderick, Oscar shared:

“I am so grateful to Roderick for being a champion of Capitol Ministries’ vision in Panama. Without a skilled Bible teacher on the ground, well connected with members of the National Assembly, it would be impossible to have a successful ministry. Roderick not only has the heart to serve political leaders but also possesses the right skills to bring the Gospel before the leaders of Panama.”

are better suited for fulfillment by God’s other ordained institutions.

The role of government is limited to and most efficient when it does the following:

- Rewards those who do good, i.e., in part those who provide jobs for others due to their giftedness should be rewarded and not penalized so as to encourage them to create more jobs and wealth for the nation.
- Punishes those who do evil, i.e., provide a strong judicial system internally and a strong military force externally (cf. Romans 13:1–8; 1 Peter 2:13–14).

When government begins to step outside of its biblically specific purposes, it becomes vast, ghastly and monstrously inefficient, resulting in the eventual, if not immediate, eclipse of its citizenry and their liberties, thereby lessening their personal abilities and resourcefulness to reflect the attributes of God to others.

V. PERU, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND POVERTY

The nation of Peru is a good example of how the violation of private property principles entraps a nation in poverty. The denial of private property rights does not always rest on the shoulders of communist ideology; sometimes it results in supposed capitalistic countries such as Peru (what I call CINO countries—“Capitalist In Name Only”).

The brilliant work of Peruvian economist Hernando de Soto serves to substantiate the aforementioned biblical principle of private property and its absence being the root cause of poverty. When governments hoard private property by making their attainment next to impossible, they stymie the creation of wealth in their own nation. Such policies are extremely shortsighted. The root cause of poverty is this: with no ability to gain working capital due to a lack of collateral from property ownership, a person cannot enter the capital market and germinate a product or a service. When Desoto’s team attempted to build a house in Peru, they were forced to go through an elaborate process:

To obtain legal authorization to build a house on state-owned land took six years and eleven months, requiring 207 administrative steps in 52 government offices. ...To obtain a legal title for that piece of land took 728 [additional] steps.¹

Regarding DeSoto’s similar attempt to obtain a permit to build a small garment workshop on the outskirts of Lima, Wayne Grudem, seminary professor and author states:

They worked at the registration process six hours a day, and it took them 289 days! The cost was the equivalent of $1,231 USD, or 31 times the monthly minimum wage equivalent (approximately three years’ salary) for the ordinary person living in Peru.²

In addition, our Capitol Ministries ministry leader in Peru informs me that all too often, due to a lack of integrity and corruption in the title industry, property titles are often found to be illegitimate.

Desoto has also documented similar roadblocks in the countries of Egypt, Philippines, and Haiti. Property ownership is next to impossible in many developing nations, thereby trapping its citizenry in poverty! It is as if these countries’ citizens are living in communist countries. This is not God's design for a nation! Such backward, biblically negligent, manifest governmental ideology serves to illustrate the wisdom of God's ways. As with the American government land giveaway of 1889, wherein the individuals prospered from private property rights, so does the whole of the nation and its administration.

Unfortunately, however, as America jettisons its trust in the Torah, it follows that there would be and are increasing threats to, and the erosion of private property ownership.

VI. AMERICAN ENVIRONMENTALISM, PRIVATE PROPERTY AND POVERTY

After taking ten years to develop and after only 25 years of operation, the San Onofre nuclear power plant in San Clemente, California, closed due to incessant lawsuits and subsequent delays caused by environmentalist groups. The executive of Southern California Edison, the utility company championing the project, concluded that San Onofre would be their utility's last sortie into the nuclear power arena. As a result, the utility has not attempted to build another power plant on its own private property.

When the environmentalists and their choking, imbalanced regulations descended on the logging industry in the Northwest, claiming the spotted owl (a facsimile to the California spotted owl, which is in abundant supply) was an endangered species, they strangled the industry. Fifty thousand jobs later, owners can no longer harvest lumber at will.

In Santa Cruz, California, environmentalist policies make it impossible for a homeowner to trim the trees on his own private property—even when their overgrowth becomes a serious fire threat or frequently cause power outages during rainy, windy weather due to limbs falling on power lines.

These three cameos serve to illustrate the encroachment of government on private property.

In California, where our family has resided for three generations, a huge stagnation in development (especially compared to Texas) has ensued since the adoption of Environmental Impact Reports and the need to abide by their requirements. Even though private property rights exist in the United States, the bottom line is that the economic benefits God intends from private property ownership have been greatly diminished—similar to those of Peru. Viewed through the lens of the ability of an owner to develop his private property, in essence, the government has become the owner of the land! What a huge philosophical about-face from the days of the Great Oklahoma Land Rush wherein the American government gifted land to its citizenry! The present overly regulatory policies of our nation's government, biblically speaking, represent the recipe for poverty.

Additional erosion of private property rights occurred during the tenure of former President Clinton when he issued executive order 13061 whereby ten additional rivers per year will become federal property—even if they flow through private land. Both former Presidents Clinton and Obama enacted orders that confiscated millions of acres of private land that have been effectively removed from private use forever. Fortunately, former President Trump enacted orders to reverse this trend. In summary of this point,

The private ownership of land best serves the continuing prosperity of any nation!

To study or visit regressive Russia or inalterable India, though being lands of plentiful natural resources, reveals countries inexorably caught in the plight of poverty. Their cultures have not embraced what the Torah teaches concerning private property rights! Israel on the other hand, a much younger nation informed by the Torah, has experienced huge economic development in a relatively short period of time. Therein lies the difference between nations of similar resources. No wonder Thomas Jefferson said that the United States would be different: "The true foundation of republican government is the equal right of every citizen in his person and property, and in their management."³

It is hard to imagine that our nation would ever even contemplate changing horses after having ridden an Old Testament stallion for so long—and having experienced the absolutely incomparable thrill of successfully riding it for so many years!

VII. BIG GOVERNMENT, PERSONAL LIBERTY AND REFLECTING THE IMAGE OF GOD

A growing government eclipses personal liberty which, in part, includes private property ownership. And as personal liberties diminish, so does an individual's ability to reflect the glory of God to others. What do I mean? One example is personal wealth. When an individual prospers, he has more to share with others: he has the opportunity to reflect, in this case, the grace of God by giving to the needs of others who are less fortunate, manifesting God's attribute of care and compassion. Often such expressions of love lead to the Gospel and another's salvation! This is in juxtaposition to government's taxing the wealth of individuals, thereby denying them personal resourcefulness with the belief that it can meet the needs of others more effectively. In truth, God did not ordain government to play this role, and bureaucracy is woefully wasteful, impersonal, and inefficient when it attempts to meet the real needs of individual citizens—especially their spiritual needs for regeneration, new life, and victory over sin in Christ!

A government that follows its God-ordained job description—for the punishment of evildoers and the praise of those who do right (1 Peter 2:14)—achieves what other institutions cannot. This kind of government simultaneously empowers its citizens with individual liberty to reflect the glory of God to other people.

VIII. SUMMARY

The right to personal property, also known as free enterprise or capitalism, is the governmental economic system supported by the Word of God. Scripture does not support communism. Whereas a nation with free enterprise leads to a prosperous nation, a communistic nation leads to a poverty-stricken nation. Historic America and modern-day Israel serve as wonderful illustrations of this biblical axiom. Accordingly, as lawmakers, do not make an ideological shift at this point in our history! Do not jettison our prosperous past that has been so beautifully informed and made possible by adherence to the Mosaic Law contained in the Torah regarding personal property rights!
